Since 1987, ICR has a history of conducting high quality research in collaboration with community partners locally, regionally and internationally to promote health, justice and equity in a diverse, multiethnic, multicultural world. Our diverse research staff are trained in anthropology, communication, education, epidemiology, geography, health education, psychology, public health, social work, sociology and nursing. We offer student interns great opportunities to engage in a variety of research activities geared toward their interests and skill profile. Please note internships are unpaid. Very rarely, depending upon the project and funding availability a stipend may be provided.
